GMU President's Park Housing Ready For Students

Miller Brothers has just completed two student housing renovation projects for George Mason University in Fairfax, Virginia, the Adams Hall and the Washington-Madison Hall buildings. Both buildings were constructed in the 1970s and in need of complete renovation to be ready for students arriving this fall.

The initial stage of this project was interior demolition of 50,737 total square feet, followed closely by the installation of new electrical, plumbing, mechanical systems, new fixtures, hardware, paint, flooring, drop ceilings, masonry, drywall and finishes. This project was on a rush schedule of only 80 days and was delivered on time to George Mason University.

Arts Space At Pearson Square Opens Creative Arts Center

The Creative Cauldron offers art, dance and creative arts classes and education through their new retail build-out in the City of Falls Church. This 2,775 square foot area has a very open floor plan with large partitioned areas for classes, a performance area, an art gallery display wall, office, restrooms, storage areas and coat closet. Future plans call for the addition of a formal stage for performances. Miller Brothers' scope included the addition of partition walls, specialized lighting, cabinetry, plumbing, ceilings, painting, fixtures and flooring. We were able to deliver this project on time and within budget to the owner.
